Louisiana Home School Options

The Louisiana Department of Education (LDOE) offers two types of Home Schooling programs. Families wishing to independently educate their children may enroll in a BESE Approved Home Study Program (HSP) or a Nonpublic School Not Seeking State Approval (NPNSB).

BESE Approved Home Study program

A student who participates in a BESE Approved Home Study program is considered in attendance at a day school and in compliance with state compulsory attendance laws. The parents have complete control and responsibility for educating their child.

Parent Responsibilities

- Covering all Home Study related costs.
- Selecting the curriculum.
 - A parent or tutor may provide instruction to the Home Study student.
 - There are no teaching certification requirements.
- Determining the child's grade placement.
 - Parents determine the grade level at which they plan to teach their child during the upcoming year.
 - Retroactive changes to a student's grade level are not allowed.
 - For instance: If a student has an application for 8th grade, the parent cannot apply for the 7th grade as the next grade level.
- Submitting initial and renewal Home Study applications by the appropriate deadline.

Nonpublic School Not Seeking State Approval

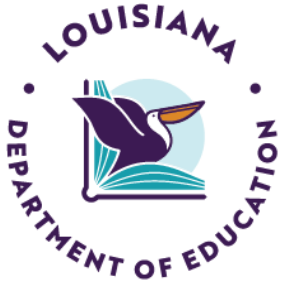

A Nonpublic School Not Seeking State Approval, also referred to as a "registered nonpublic school", has not met the criteria established by The Department Of Education for approval, nor does it seek state approval. The LDOE is not responsible for ensuring students meet compulsory attendance laws. Parents and providers assume complete responsibility for the student's education.

Students enrolled in a Nonpublic School (Not Seeking State Approval) are:

- not considered enrolled in a BESE-Approved Home Study Program.
- not considered enrolled in a BESE-Approved Nonpublic School.
- not eligible for Tuition Opportunity Program for Students (TOPS) scholarship.
- not required to take state assessments. However, testing is available upon request through the local school system for only the 4th and 8th grade LEAP. Contact the state testing coordinator to obtain the district testing schedule.
